CD Packaging has been around for years with many different types of protective and decorative packaging available. Over the years it has become a great way of promoting the what ever it is that you have on the disc. CD Packaging is used for promotional purposes as well as CD's that are sold, rather than given away. Music CD's are typically sold in clear plastic cases. When CD's are given away for promotional purposes, they are normally given away in thin flexible plastic wallets, as these cheaper and take up less space. Cardboard wallets are also a good option, but these look better if they have something printed on them.
